The training programme will offered in a series of modules on a dedicated e-training platform, developed by Intertek. These include strategies for implementing the company's individual goals, tools for communicating sustainability initiatives worldwide, auditing techniques and more, as well as information about laws and regulations specific to the industry, including the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme, U.S. and European conflict mineral legislation, OECD due diligence guidelines, the WDC System of Warranties, Responsible Jewellery Council's Code of Practice, CIBJO's Blue Book on Responsible Sourcing, and others.

The certification will be issued by Intertek, which is accredited by Accredia, the sole national accreditation body appointed by the Italian government in compliance with the application of the European Regulation 765/2008, which attests to the competence, independence and impartiality of certification, inspection and verification bodies. Accredia is a member of EA (European cooperation for Accreditation) and IAF (International Accreditation Forum). This means that the certification will be recognised worldwide.
